Joshua, & Thomas, Orphans of Thomas dec'd, Jan 1756. Sarah was widow of Richard Leary, July 1757, who "died very much in debt," (Auditors Act Oct 1757). Former war protester sells Huey Long's 'share' reprints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A former Vietnam war protester who now opposes nuclear energy and the draft is making money selling reprints of Huey Long's famous "Share Our Wealth" plan to tax the rich and help the poor.

Former New Orleanian Jack Frazier, now a resident of Indian Mills, W. Va., reprinted 1,500 copies of Long's political pamphlet and is selling them at $2 each.

Frazier contends that Long's plan to redistribute wealth by imposing heavy taxes on the rich is as relevant to today's economic problems as to those of the Great Depression, when Long was Louisiana's Kingfish.

"Long was just ahead of his time, as all great men are," he added.

Most of the publications he prints at his Solar Age Press in Indian Mills are oriented toward energy or the environment.

"Share Our Wealth: Every Man a King" was first published in 1934 and was read by millions. Long, governor from 1928 to 1934, still ruled the state as a U.S. senator until he was assassinated in hallway of the capitol in Baton Rouge in 1936.

The plan included a capital levy tax so that a family could not own more than $5 million—in contrast to such families as the Hunts, in Dallas, with a fortune estimated in the billions. An income tax would prevent a family from earning more than $1 million a year.

Critics called it a form of socialism, which would reduce everybody to the same level. Long said he did not advocate government ownership of wealth, as in socialism.

"We do not propose to say there shall be no rich men," he wrote. "We only propose that when one man gets more than he and his children and children's children can spend or use in their lifetimes, that then we shall say that such person has his share."

Frazier said he believes Long's claim that "about 10 men dominate the means of activity in at least 85 per cent of the activities that you own."

This printing of Long's pamphlet is a copy of the original. Frazier found it in the New Orleans public library, made photocopies, and reprinted it on his small offset press.

The fact that the pamphlet and its ideas date back to 1934 does not disturb Frazier.

"The game is not finished," he said. "A lot of people talk about the unfinished American Revolution."

Plans made to return porpoise to the sea

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Two months after it washed up on an Avalon beach, plans are being made to return a male harbor porpoise to its natural environment.

The four-foot-long mammal was found March 14, suffering from pneumonia, shock and heat loss. It has been cared for at an outdoor salt water tank in a maritime park by the Marine Mammal Stranding Center.

Center director Bob Schoelkopf says volunteers will fly the mammal to Provincetown, Mass., where it will be released in early June, to join schools of porpoises near Cape Cod.

HUEY P. LONG
LOUISIANA

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, D. C.

March 7th, 1933.

Dear Friend:

I think I owe to inform you of the truth regarding what we may expect. I am much disappointed over conditions that seem to immediately loom ahead. I am enclosing a few short remarks I made at the end of a discussion between several Senators, which I hope you may read.

I think I know what we should do here in Washington for our people. In fact, I am sure I know what we should do, but the blind financial powers and their powerful influences do not seem willing to let loose one inch. I think they would let the country and all its people go slap damn to hell, and go with us, before they would surrender their mastery of money control in America. I am sorry they fear me as they do. They actually, in their hearts, believe that my fight to lessen their fortunes (which are so big that they keep the common people from having anything), is worse than the work of the devil. But, bad as they picture it in their papers and magazines, the people of the United States from coast to coast are coming to think that our sole hope of salvation is to cut these big fortunes down to reasonable size and spread the money and wealth among the people generally.

What use on earth has a man for one thousand million dollars? He cannot use it. If 300 men owned that much apiece, there would be not a dime left for anyone else. And yet, we have some fortunes that were rated at as high as 8 to 10 billion dollars.

If we could only succeed in having the government hold fortunes down to a few million to any one man, then there would be something on which to run the country and for the people. When I proposed such a thing here, it looked like it would set the woods on fire against me.

Both candidates for President last time admitted we had to scale down these big fortunes and spread things among the people. But the papers and magazines do not say a word about what they said now. They jump on me all the time, trying to make whatever I say or do look like the work of four devil's angels, because, in their hearts, they blame me for starting such agitation. They haven't sense enough to know that it is wreck and ruin for all unless we do spread our wealth among the whole people.

Now that both Hoover and Roosevelt said (as I had said) that "concentrated wealth in the hands of the few" was a national calamity, if only we could depend on our lawmakers to correct things as we think should be their course, based upon what was said, all would be happy. But the masters of finance are making those words of others meaningless, because everything is involved and they have set out to wreck any man who dares what I was first to try here. I even feel sorry for our new President, because, just now, involved as matters are, I do not know how far he could get if he tried to do what both Mr. Hoover and himself were quoted as favoring during the election.

But it seems so silly not to correct these conditions. We have too much to eat, too much to wear and too many houses, and too much everything else, all right here in America. Why, under God's Heaven will we let a race of people go in want because we have too much of everything? Because a few fool financial overlords haven't sense enough to see that they can only eat and wear and live in just so much, because they can't see--won't see that if they take 90% of everything unto a handful of people to let the balance have but 10%, that their 90% of everything will rot and the people starve because they cannot get it, even in the midst of plenty.

Our Lord knew what such riches would do when He said: "They that have riches shall hardly enter the Kingdom of heaven." "Where your treasure is, there will your heart also be," etc.

He knew humanity and what could be expected of it. And if you would let the financiers alone long enough, they would make pack horses of humanity and then of themselves as a result of breaking everybody else down to the yoke of slavery and serfdom.

Our state governments, all of them, have done about all they can do. What must be done must be done here in Washington, and doing it here is the hard part of it. It's a hard battle, but we should push forward the best possible. It's our only salvation, the only way to put our people on their feet.

I am sending you herewith a copy of my speech delivered in the Senate last week on "Louisiana's Defense". It deals with the general barrage directed against me down there in a contest when I was not even one of the parties to it. I hope you read all the speech. I have to work to keep from getting sidetracked into such issues. It would take from one hour to one week to fight back or answer every attack I get. So with me getting as many as hundreds in some weeks, I can seldom even notice half of them, if I do everything else.

If we want to help in the work needed for all our people, we should not be sidetracked on arguing pro and con on Huey P. Long. It would be the part of good strategy of those opposing us if they could just keep us doing nothing but arguing all the time on whether I made away with a team of horses, burned a church or something else. As fast as you dispose of one thing they will start ten other charges. We must argue the principle: "Shall we have want in the land of too much?"

Many years ago I found out that I must take what licks I can stand and go on with my work, because there is no time to lose. If we succeed to decentralize wealth, we must keep the move going among the people in 48 states and in the two Houses of Congress here in Washington; and now that it has received such support, I hope we can push ahead without delay.

I have less ambition to hold office than I have ever had. I have worked and fought so hard, so long, that if I could see the beginning of the spread of wealth among the whole people, I would walk out of my public life tomorrow a happy man. One fighting such battles gets nothing except attacks, bricks and knocks. Everything in the world is resorted to by some elements who honestly think it a tragedy for any man to try to take the control of our wealth away from certain masters of fortune and finance.

Since writing this letter I have had printed some circulars explaining my proposed law to spread the wealth of the country. I am sending you a few of these circulars to hand out, but want you to read one. If possible, would like to have you and your neighbors write, wire or petition our President, your two U.S. Senators and your Congressman what you think of my plan. Maybe you might get your paper to print this, or your community meeting to endorse it, and to notify these same persons of it. Let me know.

Hoping you may read the two enclosed speeches, I am

Your friend,

U. S. Senator.

HPL/EJC

• THE LONG PLAN •

To Spread the Wealth of the Country Among All the People!

There is no need of hunger in the land of too much to eat; no need of people crying for things to wear in the land of too much cotton and wool; no need of homelessness in the land of too many houses.

With the one law which I propose to submit the minute Congress meets, I think most of our difficulties will be brought to an almost immediate end. To carry out President Roosevelt's plan as announced in his inaugural address for redistribution and to prevent unjust accumulation of wealth, I am now drawing a law, but without consort with the President, for the following:

1. A capital levy tax, principally on fortunes above ten million dollars, graduated so that when a fortune of one hundred million dollars is reached, the capital tax levy will take all the balance above that sum. This will not prevent aggregated capital; that is, several persons combining their wealth in one big enterprise, but will prevent any one man owning from ten million to one hundred million dollars without paying the government a substantial part and will further prevent any man from owning anything at all above a value of one hundred millions of dollars.

2. An inheritance tax, heavier in the higher brackets than at present, graduated so that no one person can inherit more than five million dollars; the balance to go to the government.

3. An income tax about the same as now exists except that it shall be heavier in the higher brackets and finally providing that no one will be permitted to keep more than one million dollars from earnings of one year.

Because of the fact that in some cases it would be difficult for large property to be sold at a fair value to pay the inheritance and capital levy taxes, the proposed law will provide that such taxes may be paid in a course of several years and that in case a fair price for the property cannot be obtained in that length of time by the tax debtor, that the government will take its per cent of the property and market it along such lines as may be best for general welfare.

This proposed legislation will give the Government approximately fifteen billions of dollars per year. It will balance the budget and still leave about twelve billion dollars for works of the government every year, but, at the same time, it will operate to scale down the big fortunes so that they cannot be so powerful to crush out the little men and little businesses. It will mean the solution of the problem of financing all such things as the guaranteeing of bank deposits, and the public construction works, including roads, navigation, flood control, reforestation, unemployment, farm relief, canals, irrigation, etc. And with this law passed, no one can ever again say that our government has not a satisfactory basis for an adequate and sufficient currency. All such can be amply financed by the government without any burden on the common citizen at all and in a manner that accomplishes the still better object of the decentralization of wealth. Such public works of the government will provide employment for every one in the country not otherwise gainfully employed and it will so stimulate all private endeavors and business that little additional legislation will be necessary.

It would be better if, coupled with this law which I am drawing, we included the plan announced by Senator Logan for the government to participate in surplus profits of industry and the plan of Senator Black to limit the hours and days of labor so that consumption may balance with production. President Roosevelt's stand for such legislation has also been announced by him on several occasions.

I wish to explain that while the President has gone far enough to tell me his plans and ideas along the lines above mentioned before and after both his nomination and election, that, however, nothing said to me has been any different nor has it gone beyond the statements which he has publicly made, which is reaffirmed in his inaugural address.

Isn't $10,000,000 to $100,000,000 enough for any one man? What's he going to do with any more? Isn't $5,000,000 enough for one child to inherit, who never hit a lick of work for it? Isn't $1,000,000 enough for any one man to make in one year?

Decentralize wealth, is the command of the Lord. See Leviticus, Chapters 24 to 27; St. James, Chapter 5.

Let your President, your two U. S. Senators and your Congressman know how you feel about this plan. Why starve while our food rots for lack of a place to sell it?

When you have read this circular, hand it to someone else to read. If you are enough interested, try to get your home paper to copy it, or, if you wish, have some more of these circulars printed in your town to hand out to others.
